Hi Bob:

Thanks very much for the autopsy reports. I ~~didn't~~ even know they existed. Its an odd coincidence but my father W. ^{A.} Dolan (Jr.) used to sign his name exactly like Dr. W. A. Dolan. In fact when we ran Dolan Oldsmobile Co., Inc. I used to be able to sign Pop's name to perfection when we needed checks etc. and he happened to be away or out of town.  I guess he got it from Doc Dolan Sr. I learn something about the family everyday it seems.

I really enjoy reading the Wm. Emery scrapbook of newspaper clippings. I think old newspaper clippings really reflect the tenor and tempo of the times and tell how things really were. Lizzie Borden: A Case Book of Family and Crime in the 1890's is great -- very informative!

I enjoy Pearson's 1937 book (Ellen Dolan bought it for $3.50) and Porter's book. I think I must have told you that Tom Dolan, Pop's older brother hid in the coal bin while Doc was boiling the flesh off the skulls of the Bordens. A grisly business at best. And right after the murders that afternoon they removed the stomachs and sent on the milk-train to Prof. Woods at Harvard. Between the autopsies and everything the bodies must have been pretty well hacked apart. No wonder Dr. got evil letters from people. I don't think they do things like that today or at least not so much. My God!!!

I am going to the Aug 4th meeting at Bristol Comm. College if at all possible -- I think I'd better call down there and ask if reservations are required or what we're supposed to do.
